The Liberation Of Gabriel King

Gaberiel King changed alot in the Liberation of Gabriel King. He got a lot braver. For Example, he conquered his fear of the rope swing. Another example is, he got over his fear of bugs. Also he got over fearing the dark. The last example is, he finially got over the fear of going to 5th grade (middle school) with Frankie Carman and Duke Evans because he was afarid of them bullying him.

In the book he changed because he also helped not only himself, but Frita too. He helped her get over her fear of the rope swing as well. Also he helped her fear of him not being there in fifth grade with her by deciding he would go to 5th with her. They also both conquered their fears of his older brother Ferance who they always thought was mean, but he really was not as they had thought he was.

The final thing is that they both learned a lot from trying to get over their fears. For example, they learned that saying they would conquer them, was easir said than actulay doing it. Like their were some fears that they couldn't conquer. For exampl, when they tried to get over their fear of Duke's father, Mr. Evans, he ended up threating them. They also learned that it took patience to get over their fears. The final thing is that they learned not to mess with some people like Mr. and Mrs. Evans.

This is how Gabe learned and changed during The Liberation of Gabriel King.
